UP, LADIES, UP!

By HAROLD BEGBIE.

Up, ladies, up! the die is cast ;
Up now, and buckle to ;
Louder than battle's thunder-blast,
England is calling you.

And there is want in every place,
And lack on every side,
While all our men stand up and face
Agony deep and wide.

And all their anguish may be vain,
And all our sacred Dead,
And all the wounds and bitter pain,
If England starves for bread.

Let not the city do you wrong,
The town your prison be ;
Come to the land and make it strong,
To keep our England free.

Up, ladies ; play a soldier's part,
On this unstricken field,
That by the valour of your heart,
England may never yield.

Thus freedom's flag shall fly unfurled
Beneath God's smiling sun ;
The gentlest women in the world
Shall overthrow the Hun.
